The study of cultured human tumor cells is a most obvious approach in experimental human cancer research. For many techniques in virology, immunology, biochemistry, and biophysics, for example, large amounts of cells may be required and such quantities are usually provided only when the cultures develop into established cell lines; when this

Derivation of Human Tumor Cells in Vitro without

These observations demonstrate that the in vitro oncogenic transformation of human cells can proceed without widespread genomic instability. The majority of adult human epithelial cancers exhibit evidence of genetic instability, and it is widely believed that the genetic instability manifested by aneuploidy or microsatellite instability plays an essential role in the genesis of these tumors.

Resistance of human tumor cells in vitro to oxidative

One cell type used the GSH redox cycle as the primary defense against H<sub>2</sub>O<sub>2</sub>, like murine tumors previously studied. Other cells seemed to utilize catalase as the major defense against H<sub>2</sub>O<sub>2</sub>. Nonetheless, with both catalase and the GSH redox cycle inhibited, all the human cells tested exhibited an inherent resistance to oxidative lysis, that is, resistance independent of detectable degradation of Generally, human cancer cells are subcutaneously injected into the hind leg or back of mice (Fig. 1 A). In an ectopic tumor xenograft model (ectopic model), the transplanted site is different from the origin of the cultured cells. The ectopic model is the standard model of cancer used for validation and assessment in oncology studies.

New Human Tumor Cell Lines SpringerLink

Abstract. There has been a feeling of frustration among many investigators trying to establish cell lines of human tumor cells. Numerous unsuccessful attempts, many of which have remained unpublished, have led to the conclusion that cell line establishment is controlled by the rare occurrence of a tumor with a built-in potential for long-term

Types of tumours Canadian Cancer Society

Tumours are groups of abnormal cells that form lumps or growths. Different types of tumours grow and behave differently, depending on whether they are non-cancerous (benign) or cancerous (malignant). Precancerous conditions have the potential to develop into cancer.

Cancer cell Wikipedia

Cancer cells are cells that divide relentlessly, forming solid tumors or flooding the blood with abnormal cells. Cell division is a normal process used by the body for growth and repair. A parent cell divides to form two daughter cells, and these daughter cells are used to build new tissue, or to replace cells that have died because of aging or damage.
