In this chapter we will explore imperfectly competitive markets. These market structures fall in between the neoclassical ideal of perfect competition and its antithesis of pure monopoly. The number of firms in an industry is a major determinant of a market's location along the market power spectrum. http://brezo.co/Theories_of_Imperfectly_Competitive_Markets-__Principles-_.pdf

Market structures Imperfect competition Policonomics

The most common forms of imperfect competition include: monopolies, oligopolies, duopolies, monopolistic competition and monopsony. Roy Harrod was the first economist to develop the theory of imperfect competition and, other authors, such as Edward Chamberlin and Joan Robinson renewed its interest and made major contributions.
